Program: The Mass Timber Revolution

Speaker: Tim Mustard, AIA
Principal, Director of Business Development
TCA Architects

Tim Mustard is a Principal at TCA Architects with more than 20 years of experience as an architect, strategist and master planner with an emphasis on high density housing, including market rate, mixed income, affordable, workforce and senior housing. Tim also strives to advance the design evolution of wood construction while pushing the limits of high design, including modular and cross laminated timber (CLT) technology."

Timber has been a construction material for over 2000 years, but Mass Timber has been making waves recently in the AECO industry thanks to advances spanning various industry players. You may have heard of Mass Timber before, but do you know its benefits to sustainability, the efficiencies of its building process, and its proven health benefits to building occupants?

Please join us for an informative presentation that will explore the manufacturing, construction, and biophilic advantages now available through Type IV buildings fully compliant with today's Building Codes. All attendees will take away important talking points about the Mass Timber revolution taking place in California and beyond.
