and left. My experience was NOTHING compared to a woman (80+ years old) before me at that location. The woman was on her sixth visit (in a county where she was born). Her county building and city hall were next door. They could not locate her original birth certificate with official government stamps. She had a copy that DPS rejected five times. She shared her story to those of us (some were her neighbors) crammed into that DPS shack in the sticks. When her turn came, she did get a Real ID due to the fact that THE ENTIRE VOCAL WAITING ROOM WAS READY TO RIOT ON HER BEHALF! P.S. I got my Texas Real ID a few months later in Plano. The DPS agent picked up my CA Real ID with two fingers off the counter like it was icky trash and promptly tossed it into the shredder! She then issued me a Texas Real ID.

Lessons can be learned in many other examples. The basic truth is that you need to consider power loss and disasters as well. Paper copies stored in safe locations are an important consideration.
